THE MANUAC DOCTOR. An Exciting Story.

It must be conferred that it is a very provoking thing to receive a letter calling you two hundred miles away on "immediate and important business." Yes, it is a very provoking thing, indeed—at least, so I found it, both in auticipation and in very deed; but there was no halp for it. Snooks, my lawyer, wrote and told me that if, on the 25th, I was not at O-, I should probably lose—never mind what, but something which induced me to pack my portmanteau in all haste, send for a hands lrive to the X Y Z station. When I arrived there, I found I was too late for the train I had wished to catch, and that the next one did start for three-quarters of an hour. Inwardly suraing my ill fortune, I went to the waiting oom, and endeavored to make myself as com-ertable as I could; but despite all my attempts. I think I never knew time to pass so slewly in all my life, except a certain twenty minutes about which I am going to tell.

Although, as I said, the time went very slowly, nevertheless it did go; and, in process of time, I found myself sangly ensuranced in a first class earlings, which had but one occupant besides myseif, a cheerful looking, little old man, with gray hair, and a arrange, restless hold about the eyes. Directly I got into the carriage he addressed me in a familiar way:

"A merry time to you." "The same to yen," said I, rathus graffly, as I was not in the best of humor, and did not feel clised to be cheeral and neighborly.
"Why, bless me, sir," said the little eld man, renewing the strack, "you have not anything barly in September R sections to the that is so, that is s
